A. BACKGROUND

Improving the quality of human resources is a series of efforts to realize the whole person and the entire Indonesian community, which includes human development, both as human beings and as a development resource. Human resource development starts from the most basic point of education. Where we know that education is the basic capital for the creation of a strong country. For this reason, we as the next generation must continue to advance education in our beloved country. Here I will discuss about the economic foundation of educational education which describes the description of humans in the context of education, so that it becomes a potential in nation building. In general, education is one of the various human investments that greatly contribute to improving the quality of human resources. With education, an individual will be able to improve their knowledge and skills so that they become human beings who have quality resources as expected. With the quality of good human resources, it is expected that humans can open up the horizons of thinking, broaden their horizons and master the use of science and technology which later can make a major contribution in advancing national development.

Education is greatly benefited from the advancement of information technology because it gets tremendous benefits. Starting from the exploration of quality learning materials such as literature, journals, and books, building forums for scientific discussion forums, to consultations / discussions with experts in the world, they can be easily done and without experiencing barriers because each individual can do so. own. Such a broad impact has given a new color or face in the world education system, which is known by various terms e-learning, distance learning, online learning, web based learning, computer-based learning, and virtual class rooms, where all the terminology refers in the same sense that is information technology-based education.

The development and application of information technology is also beneficial for education in relation to improving the quality of Indonesia's national education. The geographical condition of Indonesia with its many scattered islands and the unfriendly surface relief of its earth, the application of information technology is very appropriate to be used in the world of education. Information technology is relied on to be the main facilitator for the average education in Indonesia with distance learning capabilities not separated by space, distance and time. For the achievement of difficult areas of course the application of information technology is carried out appropriately in Indonesia. The benefits of information technology for other education fields
